

LA MAMA PRESENTS

WOMAN WITH A TOMAHAWK

I was left with the impression of having been involved in something very interesting and compelling.

Written at the intersection of lived experience, social activism, and personal memoir... WWAT is an embodied story... and important theatrical work.

Can we be witnesses to ourselves? How do we emerge through trauma? Is it a choice, or chosen for us?

A woman wielding a weapon is shot by police. Why? A woman, struggling with the pain of her own journey, mourns for the lost woman, and writes a song. How do our experiences, and those we bear witness to, shape our mental landscape? What numbs us, what makes us feel alive? How do we navigate the stories we are told, and those we tell ourselves. What is your story, and are you sticking to it?
